Wayne County Michigan has built upwards of fifty miles of concrete pavement this year, the state of New York is building about 200 miles of concrete pavement, and there are many other places which I might mention where concrete is fast coming into favor as a paving material. Now, as to the paving itself. Going back to the three principal characteristics of pavements, and taking up the last mentioned, first, that is, sanitary quality, there can be no argument on this point. Concrete floors and sidewalks have long been accepted as the almost perfect construction from this point of view. It is very easily cleaned because its surface is hard and continuous, very little can stick to it...
